“ God blessed this earth with Homer Gordon Yates. He was good and decent and loved God with all his being. His humor was simple but infectious. He found joy in so many ordinary things, and was touched by even the smallest heartfelt gestures. He was truly special. And he was GENUINE and GOOD in every single way. He was brave and he was, as his name implies, steadfast. He was sentimental but headstrong. As he said many times, “I’ve got strong shoulders to carry any burden and good ears so I can listen to any problem. So there’s nothing God and I can’t handle.” The world, I joked, could only handle ONE H.G Yates. It never seemed the world would be WITHOUT him... yet now it is. At least we can find comfort knowing he’s in Paradise now, taking in all the sites.
