“ I will always remember you telling me the most corny jokes and making me laugh because you knew I was just as corny as the jokes told. I miss you calling me every day. I'm so sorry I didn't come to visit as much as you would've liked me to. I regret that now. I come to visit with Erica and trim the dogs nails and instantly you made me a part of your beautiful family. I always felt right at home and not once did I feel awkward or out of place in your presence. That never happened to me anywhere until I met you. I'm sad you left us but, I'm also happy in a sense knowing that you're with Alan and God in heaven and no longer in pain. Debbie is sad and is lost without you and not used to having no one to take care of. She sure did go beyond her wife duties and take the best care of you as possible. I'll be sure to make her laugh and give her as much comfort as I possibly can. We are all sad and this is truly one of the greatest losses of our lives. You were ornery but very special to everyone that encountered your presence. Saying goodbye is going to be challenging for us all. Thank you for letting me be a part of your family and truly loving me like a father would his own daughter. You will never fully understand how much you impacted not only my life but so many others with the gospel you preached. No matter how bad the situation, you always had the exact right words for comfort and healing. Who will say those right words of comfort to help us deal with losing you? I love you Junior. Please look over and guide us through the difficulties of life like you always did here on earth. 💔
Forever missing you,
Nikki Jo

“ Jr and I grew up together and more like brothers than cousins. We were states apart but we always stayed in touch. He. We could we would go to church together along with our wives. It seemed the Lord had the same calling for us as we are both preachers of the word. We were going to work together at Calvary Independent and did for a little while. He took sick and wasn't able, but he will always be Pastor Moore to me! ”
